Dear Professor Meselson:

Thank you for sending me a copy of your article which was printed in the Christian Science Monitor. I am very grateful to be kept abreast of the developments on the attempt to prevent all use of chemical and biological weapons.

I have assisting me in my present research a young student, Mr. James Finan. He is seeking a doctorate at London University and the subject is "A Study of the Possible Proliferation of Chemical and Biological Weapons in International Subsystems". I have shown him some of the materials which you have sent me, and he said that he might write to you sometime to obtain some of the specialized information on which you have the expert knowledge. I shall be grateful for any assistance you could render Mr. Finan, subject of course to your own convenience. With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
