Dear Matt,

I had hoped to have a chance to come to Cambridge and talk to you, but it now begins to seem unlikely, so I have to write. I am teaching a course in the fall, at NYU, on Science and Politics, and I had hoped that you might be able to help. In particular, I had thought of discussing chemical and biological warfare, and your role in the recent developments, as illustrative of one kind of interaction between science and politics. Do you have reprints of articles you've written, references that you think might be useful? Any ideas or suggestions you might have would also be much appreciated.

If I do get a chance to come to Cambridge, I will call you, but in any case you can write to me in Woods Hole until Sept. 7, and after that, to Congratulations on your new family (not so new anymore, but its been a long time since I've seen you!) It would be nice to get together again.

Best regards,

Evelyn Fox Keller
