Dear John,

Here is a list of those persons who have accepted our invitation to attend the Chemical Weapons Conference. The only invitations currently pending are those to Hellmuth Roth, Lawrence Smith, Cyrus Vance, and Paul Warnke. I want to invite at least one more person, someone with a systems analysis and economics approach to chemical warfare questions.

I also enclose a copy of letters I have sent to three paper writers. If all three papers come through, I think they will be sufficient, but if Washington decides not to allow Meyer and Mikulak to release their papers, we will be nearly wiped out. Should we take the risk or should I try to line up more papers, realizing that this might produce too much to publish?

Yrs. etc.
