My dear Rob,

You did say that you had a most efficient secretary, and you also asked whether there was anything you could do for me.

E.E.Cummings had long been a friend of mine, and on his death there appeared a collection of his letters, among which were three or four of the many that he sent to me over the years. I understand that all of Cummings's personal papers are in the Houghton Library at Harvard. Would it be possible for your most efficient secretary to have photocopied any of my letters to Cummings which are there? There should also be poems which I sent him, written by my young daughter, Stella, which I should dearly like to have.
