Dear Julian,

Scientific American thinks that copy ~~66r~~ final corrections will be available for one day during the week of 18 February.

If you want to say something about extended range projectiles, it might fit after "spray tanks" on line 12 of page 5.

After making inquiries, Binan informed me that Canada has renounced chemical weapons of its own and also has renounced chemical weapons from any other sources ~~as~~ well. Should we remove the words "from the time being" from page 15?

Scientific American may substitute a photograph of the U.S. suit for the present Figure 6.

In the sixth line of the legend for Figure 8 I am tempted to insert the words "...representing a few percent of the existing stockpile..."

I'll be away 10-16 February, returning the night of the 16th. I can be reached by telephone at home on Sunday morning, the 17th.

as ever,

encls.
