Dear Matt,

How kind of you to send me a copy of your recent SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN piece. As partial reciprocation, I enclose a recent production of a similar nature. I hope that you find our analysis to be even fractionally as important as we found yours.

Unfortunately, it is not true that I am "no longer official." I am, as in the past, restricted from discussions because of my continuing involvement with specialized and protected data. On the other hand, my status has changed sufficiently to warrant our having some private discussions under special circumstances on related matters. I have initiated a request, and hope that within the next year I will come knocking at your door.

On a different note, it would be delightful to share with you someday the research programs in Biomedical Sciences here at General Motors. From time to time, I need advice and counsel from especially important scientists on the outside. I am looking for a subject area of ours which may be of sufficient interest for you, one that you may find interesting and worthwhile for your research. Again, I look forward to contacting you.

Respectfully,

Christopher C. Green, M.D., Ph.D.
Head, Biomedical Sciences Department
