DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY

Dear Prof. Meselson,

I'm trying to do some research on American BW research during and shortly after World War II, and I'm seeking to determine whether there was opposition, organized or not, in the years 1944-50 among American biologists to BW research.

So far, aside from some writings by Theodor Rosebury, I've not been able to locate evidence of such opposition. I would very much appreciate it if you could help me by citing names, publications, or other leads on this matter of moral opposition in those years.

Thank you very much.
Sincerely,
Bart Bernstein
