Dear Alex:

Until this morning, I wasn't quite sure where you were. However, my assistant told me that she located you and now has your addresses in Baltimore.

On April 6 Jeanne and I are going for a week to Moscow. I will try to arrange to bring back some more Russians for you to talk to. Anyway, you'll have a report upon return. Meanwhile, here is a list of rather minimal proposals for the Third BWC Review Conference. If we could get an actual new treaty or formal protocol, I would like to see it contain a challenge provision but I don't think that can come from a mere political agreement at a review conference.

Sincerely,

Matthew Meselson
