Matt:

On your quest to validate and explain the December 1990 memo ordering the destruction of documents: I can think of two people who might be able to help you. If they cannot provide the answers, they may be able to lead to those who can.

One is Amy Knight, our country's leading specialist on the KGB, and a scholar at the Library of Congress, Soviet section, headed by John Hardt.

The other is in Moscow: Evgeny Kozhokin, the deputy chairman of the now-dissolved Russian parliament's Committee on Security and Military Affairs, the body that oversaw the KGB. Kozhokin is a bright, progressive young man, who should be able to guide you.

Regards,

Bob
