Dear Professor Haycock:

Thank you for your very kind invitation of July 21. I regret that due to an extremely full academic schedule and previous commitments to attend conferences during the '94-'95 school year I must decline your gracious offer.

Again, thank you for inviting me and I wish you much success with the upcoming seminar series.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Meselson:

On behalf of my department, I would like to invite you to present a seminar to our department during the '94-'95 academic year. This would involve spending a day with the department and include meetings with faculty members, lunch with graduate students and post-docs, an afternoon seminar, and a reception and dinner afterwards.

Normally, speakers arrive late Thursday, spend Friday with the department, and depart on Saturday or Sunday at their convenience. Hometown expenses, round-trip coach airfare, ground transportation, hotel, meals and an honorarium will be provided.

I hope that you will be able find time in your busy schedule for the upcoming year to visit our department and sample the unique ambience of New Orleans and its world-renowned cuisine.

I would greatly appreciate your consideration of this invitation. Please contact me by phone, fax, or E mail (see below) at your earliest convenience. Alternatively, I will follow up this letter by phone in a few weeks.

Sincerely yours,

John W. Haycock, Ph.D.
