Dear Matt:

I was delighted to encounter you in Cambridge. It was very kind of you to send me the important material on international criminal law in arms control. This seems to me a first-rate idea.

Having people of the caliber of John Dugard and Phil Heymann involved bodes well for the value of this enterprise. I think you are wise to foster it on a deeply international basis rather than a U.S. initiative.

My only regret is that I am not in the grant-making field any longer. If I were, I would surely want to support this far-sighted work. I wish you all the best in your perennial quest for a civilized world.

Warm regards,
