Dr. Meselson: You may not get this until after we see one another on Wednesday but I thought it worth a try.

With regrets, it does not look like Joe Jemski and I will be able to meet with you on Thursday. Joe has been going through a traumatic week. On Sunday evening, his wife, Mary suffered a fall with severe head lacerations and the possibility of concussion. She remains hospitalized, but Joe has hopes of getting her home today.

And I have run into a very busy week with volunteer community service functions requiring my participation. Don't retire as it cuts into one's time too much.

But both Joe and I hope to attend your lectures tomorrow and very much look forward to meeting your spouse and seeing you again.

Regards, Bud
