Dear Michael,

Paul Doty and I are preparing a paper on the Geneva Protocol but it will not be ready for perhaps another two or three weeks. I hope it will still be useful at that time.

I will be away, indeed far away, during the next two weeks. My bride of one day and I are leaving momentarily for an island near Tahiti.

Later in September, I hope to visit Washington and will certainly give you a call. For now, all I have to communicate is the enclosed article from the British journal New Scientist.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Matthew Meselson
